NEW TITLE

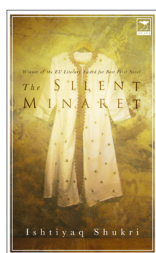

The Dinaane* Debut Fiction Award replaces the European Union Literary Award and as before celebrates an outstanding fiction manuscript from a debut writer. The winning manuscript is published by Jacana Media and the winner awarded a R35 000 cash prize. The Dinaane is supported by Exclusive Books' Homebru campaign. This year, the first runner-up will also receive a significant prize: a writing bursary to the value of R20 000, in memory of Gerald Kraak, who was instrumental in the successful running of the Jacana Literary Foundation until his passing away in 2014.

The inaugural Dinaane was judged by a panel of three judges: Maureen Isaacson, Fred Khumalo and head judge Pamela Nicols. Thirty-one manuscripts were eligible for the prize, and the judges stressed the variety of the entries received, which gave them a privileged insight into South African society and how people conceive the contemporary.

The Dinaane winners will be announced at an award ceremony on the evening of 5 May and books will be supported by Exclusive Books' Homebru Campaign.

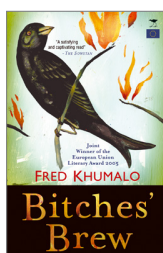

*The word 'dinaane' in Setswana means 'telling our stories to one another'
